4:40	Stop Stop is a popular game in my country. It is very easy to play, and it's lots of fun. The game is better if it is played with many children. To play Stop, you only need a ball. To start the game, one child, takes the ball. The rest of the children stand around that child, who has to throw the ball up and say one of the children's names. The rest of the children have to run away as far as possible. He has to say, "Stop!" The child who is named has to get back to catch the ball. If the named child catches the ball in the air, he can immediately say another name and run away. If he doesn't catch the ball in the air, as soon as he catches the ball, he has to say, "Stop!" Then all the other children have to stop running. The one who said stop looks to see which child is near him and walks 3 long steps, and tries to hit that child with the ball by throwing it at him. If the child who is trying to hit the other child doesn't hit him, he has to start the game again by throwing the ball up and saying another name. However, if he hits the other child with the ball, that child has to start the game.	Ball	Chil

Queimada (A Brazilian Game of Tag)

Ball

Baloo

To play this game, you form two teams. Each team has a field and there is a place called the cemetery. One person from each team starts in the cemetery, so he's dead. The rest of the team starts in the field.

The person who is at the cemetery always starts the game by throwing a ball to the opposite side where his partners are. The "living people" from this team have to catch the ball and throw it against the other team. If someone from the opposite team touches the ball, he is burnt, so he is dead. The "dead ones" go to the cemetery, and the game finishes when every "living person" from one team dies.
