Game: Rats and Rabbits

Divide the Joeys into two teams. One is called Rats and the other is called Rabbits. Each team has a designated wall. Joeys can sit back to back on the floor or can stand back to back facing their wall. If the leader calls "Rats" then the rats have to run to their wall with the rabbits in pursuit (and vice versa). Anyone caught has to join the opposite team.

Carpet Time:

Shantelle – linking talk, promise Challenge

Cubs - This year is Cub Scouts 100th Birthday. The success of Scouting in 1908 with boys from 11 to 18 years gave rise to appeals to provide a similar activity for younger boys and so, in 1916, the Wolf Cub Section for 8 to 11 year olds was formed. Kipling's Jungle Books were used to provide an imaginative background to the activities and, by the end of the year, over 10,000 boys had enrolled as Cub Scouts. Joey Scouts started in 1990 in Australia and has only been around for 26 years so Joeys are the youngest member of the Scouting family in Australia.

Rotational Group Activities:

1. Make a cub scout

The Cub Scout uniform was very different to the one we wear today. In fact the uniform was a green jumper, grey shorts, a scarf and a cub cap. Using teddy bear biscuits as our model and icing the Joeys can make a Cub Scout.

During the activity the Leaders to talk about the difference between our current uniform and what Cubs used to wear.

2. Jungle Book Characters

Part One

Explain to the Joeys that Cubs is themed on the Jungle Book and that many Leaders take on one of the character names as their 'Scout name'. Ask the Joeys if they know any of the Cub Leaders names and record them on the white board, chalk board or chart paper. Ask the Joey Scouts to name some of the Jungle Book characters that they know they may have named some already. Make a list on a white board, chalk board or chart paper so all the Joeys can see the names. You may want to prompt the Joeys to come up with a list. Or you could just show their picture. You may need to help with some of the names. Tell the Joeys they may need to remember these names for the next game.

Part Two

Place the pictures up one end of the hall and the name plates in the middle of the hall. Joey Scouts can be placed into even teams and stand at one end of the hall.

On go the first Joey from each team runs to the centre of the hall and takes a Jungle book character name plate and then runs to the end of the hall. Once at the end of the hall the Joey matches the character name to the character picture and then runs back to the team to tag the next Joey and so on until all characters have been matched to their name plate. First team to complete the task is the winner.

In Case

Sixes and Wolves.

In Baden-Powell's "Wolf Cub's Handbook" he mentions Sixes being of the six colours representing the colour of Raksha's cubs.

A Six, as you probably know, is made up of about six cubs under a Leader, and these always stick together for work or for play, and each Six is called after a Wolf by its colour.

Grey - Grey Brother
Black - Black Plume
Brown - Brown Tip
Tawny - Tawny Fur
Red - Red Fang
White – White Claw

Game is played as for NSEW using coloured items and the cub six colours. They can be called or incorporated into a story.
